Code of conduct

Child safe standards toolkit: resource three

The child safe standards require organisations that provide services for children¹ to have a code of conduct that establishes clear expectations for appropriate behaviour with children. A code of conduct can help you enforce appropriate behaviour with children in your organisation to help protect children from abuse.² You may already have an existing code of conduct. You can use this resource, which includes a sample code of conduct, to develop or review your organisation's code of conduct.

What is a code of conduct?

The sample code of conduct outlines expected standards for appropriate behaviour with and in the company of children, including online conduct.

It should be adapted to fit your organisation and the services you provide for children. You could use this example as a basis for developing a code of conduct, or use it to address any gaps in your existing code of conduct.

Your organisation may wish to use a code of conduct:

- as part of induction training for new leadership members, staff and volunteers
- as part of refresher training for existing leadership members, staff and volunteers
- to inform parents/carers and other persons associated with the organisation what behaviour they can expect from the organisation's leadership, staff and volunteers
- to support and inform organisational protocols and reporting procedures should breaches of the code be suspected or identified
- include a reference to the code of conduct in employment advertisements and contracts to ensure compliance.

Where the term 'Aboriginal' is used it refers to both Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. Indigenous is retained when it is part of the title of a report, program or quotation. Throughout this paper we refer to 'Aboriginal peoples' rather than 'Aboriginal people' to reflect the plurality and diversity of Victorian Aboriginal communities.
